RONALD McDONALD
HOUSE CHARITIES
WESTERN WASHINGTON & ALASKA

Dear friends,

As 2010 came to a close we realized again how much we owe to each and every one of you who holds this House close to your heart. We are full year round with seriously ill children and their families and they need a clean room, a pantry, dinners, friendly faces and all the support that we can gather. In 2010 that support meant new furniture for the family bedrooms and TV areas, dinners most nights of the week, therapy dogs every day and all together it added up to more volunteer hours than ever before – over 36,000.

You help in so many ways to make this House a place of comfort, support and hope. You send in donations, attend our events, drive the van, make quilts, cook dinner, volunteer each week and together you helped ease the burden of nearly 700 families who were going through the worst time of their lives. That support is so important to the families who need this House. They often comment that people who didn't even know them volunteered their time and resources to help and that they will never forget that.

We are honored to have such a large and committed group of friends. On behalf of all of us here thank you so much for all that you do.

Our mission

Ronald McDonald House Charities of Western Washington & Alaska® supports families with seriously ill children. Our programs include the Seattle Ronald McDonald House® and a van service for families staying in Anchorage while their children receive medical care.

Our families

Judah's Story

Sara and Jason, Judah's parents, first met when Sara travelled from her home in Washington state to volunteer for an organization in Belize, where Jason already lived. Falling in love with each other and a life of volunteering, they married and started a family, remaining in Belize. It was a life of family, friends, and service, all in glorious natural surroundings.

Given the family's overall well-being, it seemed odd when what appeared to be a simple spider bite began annoying Judah, then 8 years old. A trip to the doctor revealed no reason for concern and it was only as an extra precaution the doctor decided to take a biopsy of the bothersome bump, which needed to be sent to the United States for the testing. Six weeks later, the results gave everyone a deep shock: cancer.

"We never in a million years thought it would be cancer," says Jason, shaking his head. "The diagnosis was Non-Hodgkins Blastic Lymphoma." The very next day, the family of 5 was en route to Seattle Children's Hospital. Elijah, Judah's five-year-old brother, was so befuddled by all the sudden activity he packed only stuffed animals in his luggage.

Judah's aunt works in healthcare and one of the first things she told the family when she found out they needed to go to Seattle Children's Hospital was to call the Ronald McDonald House. "We were so lost. Housing was the last thing on our minds. Now having the House here has made it so we can deal with everything else." Sara explains.

The whole family was delighted to discover that rather than a dismal and stark place, the House offers so much that is joyful. "I was surprised to see all the other kids," Keilah, Judah's older sister says. "The staff and the volunteers who work here are so nice; it's fun here." "It's been wonderful getting to know so many great families and making friends," confirms Sara.

Jason and Sara also marvel at the contributions of volunteers to the House. "I have never seen such a volunteering spirit as I have here in the past 8 months," says Jason. "I look forward to the kids getting older so we can come back and volunteer ourselves."

Our programs

Meal Program Helps Nourish Families Volunteers Provide Hope and Care Through Preparing Meals

Volunteers make and serve dinner for families at least 4 times a week. They provide meals for 75 people in House A and 25 people in House C.

Ask almost any family at the House what they appreciate the most about being here, and the Meal Program is always mentioned. At least 4 nights a week, and often more, volunteer groups of friends or co-workers come into the House and prepare homemade meals for the families to enjoy.

Volunteer kitchen supervisors devote their time to helping get the groups started and ensure things run smoothly. A complete and nutritious meal is always on the menu and includes a main dish, vegetables, sides and, much to the children's delight, dessert. Always dessert!

These dinners are especially important to the families because many times they have spent long and grueling days at the hospital or are exhausted from medical appointments. Providing a warm meal to their family is understandably the last thing on their minds, yet vitally important to staying healthy themselves. Families marvel at this tangible evidence of our community's caring. "The volunteers who cook the dinners – they are always so kind and polite. The meals are really wonderful and very, very much appreciated, especially after 12-hour days in the hospital," say Phillip and Jennifer, parents of 3-year-old Luke.

Volunteer participation in the Meal Program has increased year by year from its modest yet meaningful beginning. "We started with 20 dinners per year in House C," remembers Judy Adams, Manager of Volunteer Services. "Now our goal is to serve dinners 5 nights per week in both House A and C."

Whether they get to eat at mealtime or come in later to find leftovers, families are extremely grateful for the dinners. "A lot of times, if those dinners weren't provided, I wouldn't eat at all." says a father.

Recipe Book Created by and for Meal Program Volunteers Contains Over 90 Recipes for Large Groups

From Ambrosia to Breakfast Burritos, Italian Chicken to Meatball Stroganoff Supreme, the House's first recipe book aims to please palates, provide nutrition and help the dinner groups tackle the important task of cooking for large groups with ease. In addition to recipes, the book includes quantity conversions, kitchen and work flow charts and other helpful information. The families and staff of the House extend our warmest thanks to the volunteers who enable this valuable program to exist.

"One of my favorite parts of staying at the House is we get dessert every night!" Michael, age 6

Our volunteers

Kite-making is loads of fun with lots of pretty colors to use

To say that volunteers are the heart of the House is an understatement. Volunteers help the families in all ways, large and small. They clean, cook, bring therapy dogs to visit, pull weeds, plant flowers, bake cookies, host movie nights, drive vans on shopping expeditions, run food drives and so much more.

Children staying at the House particularly appreciate the activities, which are run by volunteers and often coincide with dinnertime. Activities in 2010 included dance lessons, cookie decorating, a wide variety of crafts, sports team visits and plate painting.

The activities provide an especially bright spot in otherwise dull days of either medical appointments or the interminable waiting in between treatments. "When Henry knows there is an activity planned, he always wants to make sure we get back to the House in time to participate," says one mother.

Activities also give the kids staying at the House the opportunity to make and be with friends, and parents enjoy the short break while knowing their children are amused and occupied.

Procedural changes to keep activities safe and high quality were introduced in 2010, and instead of the expected drop in volunteer participants, the number of activities actually increased, much to everyone's delight.

"I like activities because we do fun things. I like to build stuff - building stuff is fun. And my mom says she's going to hire me as a painter because I'm a really good painter."

- Isaac, age 6

special thanks

Each month, more than 500 community members volunteer at the House. Below are groups that went the extra mile for our families in 2010. Each of these dinner and work groups came two or more times during the year. Thank you for supporting the House —we couldn't do it without you.
